NEW CENTRAL RAILWAY BRANCH

LOWE'S LTD
LOWE'S

IN the year 1899 Lowe's entered business in a small way, pictured above, with a staff of 3, and with incalculable successes, in the short span of 15 years, have attained the position of Australia's Largest Men's Wear Organisation.

The rapidity of this progress, from one to three stores, and from three employees to 300, has not been achieved by mythical methods. It was actuated by a policy adopted at the commencement of our career—a policy that has lifted us, rung by rung, up the ladder of success—a policy familiar in every Australian home—the policy "Lowe's Sell it for Less," coupled with "Keeping faith with the public," no matter what it costs.

To-day, as we throw open the doors of our magnificent new branch, illustrated here, and situated at the corner of Pitt-street and Rawson-place, right opposite the Central Railway Station, we feel that very high ideals have been attained.

The main object of this new branch is to enable those who are deterred by time or occupation from visiting our George-street or Oxford-street Stores, to avail themselves of "Lowe's Sell it for Less" benefits.

The fine new store pictured here, with its 250 feet of window space, and showing a most brilliant array of clothing for all Mankind and the Boy, is easily one of the finest shows in the world. We cordially invite you to view the great display.

The selection of Clothing for Man and Boy, the comforts and conveniences devised for our patrons, the same courteous Sales' Staff, and the maintenance of our "Sell it for Less" policy will, at this new store, be adhered to with that closeness and integrity which have characterised our unfailing efforts in the past at both our George and Oxford Street Stores.

Next Monday, Eight-Hour Day, is Summer's real "debut." The last few weeks we have been opening hundreds of cases, so that every department in each of our three stores is replete with the finest assortment of Summer clothes in Australia. Each item is supreme value, and the prices are further evidence of Lowe's "Sell it for Less" policy.

To commemorate the day WE celebrate, we quote here some alluring values in holiday wear, obtainable at either of our three stores.

FOILED.

GERMANS' SECOND EFFORT

BEATEN BACK.

IN FRANCE AND RUSSIA.

HEAVY LOSSES.

It is officially stated that the situation in France is generally satisfactory.

Mr. Maxwell, the well-known war correspondent, goes further, and says it is certain that Germany's second great effort has failed, and there must be another retreat.

A German wireless message admits that the Germans have been unable to check the advance of the Allies' left.

In Russian Poland the German invading army met with defeat in a big battle, and is retiring, harassed by the enemy.

Italy has formally protested against the Austrians placing floating mines in the Adriatic.

The Russian ambassador at Rome states that the retreating Austrian army is surrounded.

WAR BULLETIN.

MELBOURNE, Thursday. Sir George Reid cables from London under date of Wednesday, 25 p.m.: "Paris reports that on the left being an action is developing. Further north the enemy delivered a vigorous attack at Trarcton, but were repulsed with loss from Reims to the Meuse."

"There is no change in the Woerthe district. Severe fighting is proceeding."

"The right wing is unchanged."

"October 1, 4.30 a.m.—Official: A warship captured off Cancon River nine German merchant ships, of a total tonnage of 39,515 tons."

"The submarine Soden has been captured and commissioned."

ALLIES' ADVANCE.

FURTHER DEVELOPMENT.

GERMAN REPULSES.

PARIS, Oct. 1. A communiqué states that the general situation is satisfactory. There is no perceptible change of front, except in South, near Woerthe, where we occupied Serche, and midway between St. Mihiel and Pont-a-Mousson, and advanced to the slopes above the fort de Mad, a stream running into the Meuse.

A previous communiqué stated that the action is developing in a more northerly direction on the left of the North Somme. The Germans were repulsed with severe losses north-east of Fort de l'Alme.

There is a full retreat from Reims and the Meuse.

Some advance after severe fighting was made in the Woerthe district.

The situation on the extreme French right is unchanged.

ENEMY'S EFFORTS.

FORCED MARCHES.

LONDON, Oct. 1. The correspondent of the "Daily Mail" at Paris says the Germans have been struggling for a fortnight to avoid having their right wing turned. They have kept pushing their front further north-west, but the Allies have been always overlapping them.

Both sides have brought up very large reinforcements, necessitating long forced marches. The French troops again and again have marched 20 miles a day.

The Germans on Saturday realised that their efforts were in vain. They altered their plan, and tried to break the Allies' line at Albert.

The Germans on Sunday and Monday gained ground. Then the French brought up many quickfitters and their deadly fire checked the advance.

The enemy kept up their effort zealously. But it clearly failed on Tuesday afternoon. This time there was no French battery within a mile of Albert; but, to the astonishment of the French gunners, the Germans altered their fire and began systematically shelling Albert, an open and undefended town of 800 inhabitants. Several batteries assisted, and the town collapsed like a house of cards—now the town hall, now a group of cottages—and that town was now a burning ruin.

Meanwhile the road to Amiens was crowded with women with babies, and some aged people, too feeble to walk, were trundled in barrows.

The German revenge for their reverse was complete.

GERMAN ADMISSION.

A German wireless message admits that the Germans have been unable to arrest the advance of the Allies' left. The Allies have also advanced at several other points.

INVADERS BEATEN.

GREAT EFFORT FAILS.

LONDON, Oct. 1. Mr. W. Maxwell, the war correspondent of the "Daily Telegraph," telegraphing on Sunday, says: "It is certain that Germany's second great effort has failed, and there must be another retreat."

An English General, who is incapable of exaggeration, says "We have had good days, you may be sure they were more than good."

"A French officer added that a fort had been blown up, with certain members of the German headquarters staff."

"I spent two days in another deserted chateau, and the sound of gun-fire made it evident that the Germans were retreating for two days the German guns in the west did not return the fire of the Allies' heavy artillery."

"Even the quarries looked deserted, and it is rumored that the Germans evacuated them owing to the unburied dead poisoning the air. But they are not ill-deserted, for the French attacked one series of quarries at Fort de l'Alme, under cover of the mist, and killed the defenders like rats in a hole."

"In another case the Allies set fire to a spinnery, and the cover of the smoke reached a point commanding the quarry. The enemy fled, leaving many dead."

"It is certain that the enemy is beaten along the whole line, despite reinforcements and the desperation with which the Germans fought. They made terrific attacks for two days in overwhelming numbers, but reinforcements arrived at a vital moment."

"A large after charge was delivered until the plains were strewn with wounded and dying, and the German ranks were shattered and driven back to their entrenchments."

"Similar bayonet attacks and counter-attacks were made throughout the western flank, and victory always rested with the Allies. Their losses were heavy; but British Cross officers state that the dead were not nearly so numerous as they expected."

"There must be another retreat to the east and north, but the Germans must still await the result of the very next moment in order to save the centre."

"The 'Daily Chronicle's' Paris correspondent, telegraphing at midnight, commenting on the latest war news, says: 'It has been long to wait for good news, but the news is extraordinary. The public must still await the result, but it is evident that the official believe that the worst is over, and the best may be hoped for.'"

THE SEAT OF WAR IN FRANCE.

The above map covers the whole of the ground embraced by our cablegrams in reference to the operations in France and Belgium this morning. Roughly, the line of battle in France, starting from the north-west, runs from a little north of Albert, through Peronne, Chaulnes, Roye, Lassigny, Ribecourt, Soissons, Reims, Varennes, Verdun, Spade, Toul, and south to Belfort.

IN BELGIUM.

SORTIES FROM ANTWERP.

GERMANS HARASSED.

ANTWERP, Sept. 30. The garrison continue their guerilla tactics. There is a sortie every night, which has harassed the German outposts. Trains have been blown up and outposts picked off nightly.

Despite the activity of the garrison, the numbers of killed and wounded civilians is still in excess of the killed and wounded Belgian soldiers.

The cost was heavy, but the French were slowly retreating westward, and on September 22 the Germans reentered Peronne.

The French then concentrated their heavy guns on the position, and drove out the Germans, who, however, brought up further artillery and were able to recapture the town on October 28. The French fighting doggedly for every inch.

The French find that an effective method of disturbing the enemy is by means of flying columns of heavy cavalry. At night time these columns ride through the German lines at full speed, charge through the barbed wire, burning and blowing up motor-cars, and upsetting great quantities of oil.

During the fighting at Peronne three of the Allies' batteries suddenly opened fire, and with the first discharges destroyed a complete German battery. Thereafter they rendered position after position untenable.

The commander of the French force took from his own tunic a medal which he had won for bravery, and placing it on the cyclist's breast, said: "It was given to me for saving one life, you have saved hundreds."

The Russians are operating in the forest and attacking the German flank, with a view to cutting communications.

The Russian Ambassador states that the Russian army is surrounded near Duka.

The Russians captured 500 automobiles and much ammunition and food.

The bombardment of the forts at Waelen and Wavre continues.

The Germans also attacked the forts Liezele and Breconck, but the Belgians made several sorties and drove the enemy back with heavy losses.

AUSTRIA'S PLIGHT.

THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE.

PLAN OF CAMPAIGN.

ROME, Sept. 30. A telegram from Vienna states that the Russian have left Przemyśl completely surrounded, and two columns are advancing rapidly along the railways in Galicia.

The northern column assaulted Tarnow, and the southern column occupied Stry, and advancing westward, cut off a section of the Austrian forces which the Russians' northern army was driving southward.

There is every indication that the Russians do not intend to capture Cracow, but to invest it in a similar way to Przemyśl, and then advance on Breslau and join the Russian centre for the invasion of Germany.

DURATION OF WAR.

EARL KITCHENER'S VIEW.

LONDON, Sept. 30. Earl Kitchener, addressing Territorial soldiers to depart for the front for foreign service, said it was quite true that the Germans were getting short of food.

He did not think the war would last long, but he was not going to take risks. He wanted every man he could possibly get, so that if they were wanted about December they would be ready to go.
